Today's Program

Unlocking Peak Performance in Your Workforce, Kari Dunn and Rebecca Christianson

Today's Program:

Top 5 training trends for companies

All In Development Company offers training sessions that cover the top 5 training trends transforming communication, motivation and productivity in today's workforce. Kari Dunn and Rebecca Christianson will cover how to bridge generational gaps, boost morale and create a culture of accountability and performance. The program will include a hands-on sneak peek at All In: Healthy Body, Healthy Mind, Healthy Team—a training experience that fuses personal wellness, team engagement and real-world strategies to build a more energized, high-performing workforce.

Meet Rotarian Chad Renicker

Chad moved to Dickinson in 2012 and became a Rotarian the same year because he didn't know anyone. A general contractor by trade, he's now a property manager. He and his wife have three children, and he likes golfing. Rotary is the first and only club Chad has ever joined. He enjoys the Highway Clean Up project so much that he organized it for several years and he also likes volunteering at the Pancake Karnival.

Last week: Clean water, well saving kids

Rotarian Mike Kiedrowski has 36 years of fundraising experience and last week shared that an estimated $84 million will transfer to the next generation in the coming 20 years. It's the greatest wealth transfer in history, he said, and he told us about several creative ways to leave funds to future generations and favorite charities. Mike said that philanthropy is giving time, talent and treasure to help others and improve society. He said the idea is to let the donor experience the joy of giving and then steward the gift.

High school vocational scholarship applications are now open.
See Rotarian Erv VanVeldhuizen for information.
